MARKET

The San Francisco Bay Area, located in Northern California, is home to more than 7 million people. The area consists of 9 counties, 101 cities and comprises 7,000 square miles. All of the region's 9 counties touch the San Francisco Bay.

The Bay Area has a land area of 4.4 million acres (excluding bay waters and large lakes). In 2000, approximately 16% or about 700,000 acres of the region's total acreage were developed for urban use. Of those developed acres, 60% area residential and 40% are non-residential (employment, government, schools and major infrastructure).

San Francisco is the most urbanized county with 82% of its land developed. The remaining counties have developed land areas ranging from 7% - 28%. Like many large urban centers, the Bay Area will continue to grow in the foreseeable future. The following table illustrated the forecasted growth in total population of the 9 counties over the next few decades.

The Bay Area has a highly productive, knowledge-based economy supported by an outstanding talent base and a spirit of creativity and innovation. It has repeatedly reinvented itself, and has emerged from the 2001 and 2008 downturns with a broad-based, productive economy that remains one of the most innovative on earth.

The region is also one of the most appealing places to live in the United States. It has a mild climate, a splendid natural setting, and an informed sophisticated culture. Its geographic hub, San Francisco, is one of the most beautiful and cosmopolitan cities in the world and a famed destination for travelers.
